for he neems to have been a wanderer and a worldcitizen. He had a mother, for are there not memories of her fuggering in his meey songs; does not her face lean over him everywhere in the wide world's homeless sorrow? Does he not sing, Sarely it could not here been Fancy but e homeless heart that called her. He lived through childhood, saking part in the light-playing of birds and breeze, knowing the fairy whisperings from loving leaves above his dreams; he had merry reces with brooks and butterflies—all things lovad him and he loved all things and all-else why in his restless on ambitious days did he so years towerd what had been and whicper these loving words? TO A CHILD.

O while from me, this lovely morn, depart breams vague and vain and wild, fing, happy child, sing, dance into my heart, Where I was once a child.

The fairy Febo-children love you, try
To steal year loving voice;
Flying you laugh—they, laughing while you fly.
Laughing your glas, resoice!

Dreams vague and vain and wild, Piny happy child, sing, dance within my heart,

Play nappy cand, cance whole any heart.

Where I will be a child:

He were a log; he played marbles end hide and sask with Time, though Time won all the games, and always found him at last. In the youth there were unsidens lovely and genile, and he had a heart whough often, they it seemed, had none, for the last heart lovely and genile, and he had a heart who heart lovely and genile, and he had a heart lovely and genile and lovely and genile and lovely and genile and lovely and genil though Hope bears Love's delicious blossoms often Fillmore because they broke up certain fillbustering gas to burn; but if any means whatever can be un in his song, yet Depair hes shed at times slow expeditions against Cuta. He could hardly find proper to light us at half the rates we tow pay for poison-drops upon their flesh and fragrance; of his words strong enough to express his detectation of this indispensable necessity, let us have light upon expectations against the sense at times only poissol-drops not beir field and fragrance; of his accordance of the world's whole heart is full; they are roses rooted there and climbing forever to the kieses of newer Mays. The Republicans insist on "fighling it mails e quantity of which we have no note, but out," and the Democrets would not beve peace if probably quite sufficient to raise the suggegate to 650 millions for the whole city. As the North American observes, it will strike were in their power to attein it, for their political existence depends upon starming the fears of the South and appealing to the friends of the Constitution all the North. The South may not like to make the admission, but they have obeyed the Nurthern leaders of the Democracy, just as a child obeys a hard master who corries his fernle nuder his urm leaders of the Democracy, just as a child closy a hard master who carries his ferale under his urm, and therefore they have made excessions of nedispated rights, frittered away their Constitutional guaranties, and made the protection of the lew as faelle as an infant's strength. If the South continue to be Democratic, the North will still be Republican and carry on the irrepressible conflict. But there are conservatives at the North who desire to cooperate with the growing South and the boundless West in putting down party and partition from all the fanaticism—the fareficism—the fareficism—the fareficism for Northern Nullition. This is the plain statement of existing facts, and we see now in dany bound to incurin the with a cooperation can most effectively be commenced. agranging the part of Leonora di Guzman, which is fall af splendid music and effective situations. Signor Sbriglia is the Fornando, Signor Gnone assument tha fine baritome character of King Alphonso XI, and Signor Barilli, the Grand Inquinitor Baltazar, Superior of the Order af St. James of Compostella. La Favorita possesses all the melodic excellance of Donecti's most inspired style, and should never fall to attract a crowded audience. The Parodi troupe in all its departments is complete, and the operas are produced with a perfectness which would do credit to any city.

THEATER.—The benefit of the Misses Gougenheim and the last night but one of their engagement, is announced for this evening. They produce the Hidden Hand for the fifth time, and nothing could be efford which would draw better. It has attracted over $2,000 to the Theater on the formula it has been a country for the first time, and nothing the first time, and nothing a country of the first time, and nothing time, the first time, the aights it has been acted, which is unprecedented in the dramatic annuls of our city. We are pleased to know that the box sheet evinces the certainty of another crowded house this evaning. It was rumored about town that they had a fight, but such was not the case.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Times savait is not fire, as stated in the dispatch to the Herald, that England has damanded an explanation from our Government with reference to the course parsued by General Harney. On the contrary, the paper submitted by Lord Lyons was a proposition for a settlement of the dispute, as the treaty provides no remedy in case of a disaver-summent between the loandary commissionare. The treaty being thus exhausted, the parties are thrown back on first principles, and England now ubmits a programme for an adjustment of the difficulty, in which she claims the island of San Juan. Servient Case has just returned his reply to this preposition, declining in the mest positive terms to recognize so much as the shadow of a title on the part of England to the the sax step, as we hold possession.

PEWS IN ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

A report from the organization committee and an address, proposing a plan of formation, were adopted. The meeting resolved to print the report and address in the English and German languages, and address in the English and German languages, and send copies of the same to the various congregations from the island of Jeva from October 1.

Remorkable.—We learn that some time in March hast an old gentleman, testiding for many years in have engaged them on, to sirrettimes have, was sitting in his house, a few feet from an open wirefow, when a deve flew in and alighted on his shoulder. He kept his seat, lust called his daughter, who was in an adjoining room, to come quickly. She came in, and, penting to the Utied, he told her to take it wife and put it he acque and take good cars of it as long as it lived. She gent the hist off and put it he acque and take good cars of it as long as it lived. She gent father remarking to ber at the same time, "My race ir researly over—I hast due in two weeks." He was then in ordinary health, but, strange to tay, be died that day two warks. The bird is yet in its enge, and m possession of the family, who regard it with feelings of peaking the camily, who regard it with feelings of peaking and the strainty of the male trait; the mules arise; th

A letter from Figures. The stating of the revelations made in the letters left behind har by the Duchass of Parma, care that the correspondence was with the Emperor of Anstria and the Lagithmist chiefe in Paris. In the letters addressed to the Emperor of Austria by the Duchass, subsequent to the declaration of testrality, the Emperor was conganized with all the movaments of the Sardindan army, and the most advantageous plan of ettack. The Emperor to in urged to act energetically before the French are in lady, and to come to the encourage of Austrian dominion in the Funiantle. "The safaty of Austrian dominion in the Funiantle." The safaty of Austrian," adds the Duches, "is in the promptitude of its operations. If it waits, it is lost in Italy, together with it a lilies." In the letters to her correspondents in Faris, the person of the Emperor Napsion did not escape, the Duchess giving him to titles of "egre," and "the greatest Tartuffe of modern places."
